THE CONGRESS

The Zionist Congress which is now in session in Basle has before it some very fundamental problems which require firm treatment. Its success or failure to deal with them effectively will be a test of its competence to function as the supreme instance in organized Jewish life. The chief concern of the Zionist organization is, of course, the situation in Palestine. Now it is recognized that conditions in Palestine are far from satisfactory.

During the time since the last Congress the Jewish effort in Palestine has suffered retrogression. Immigration has stopped. Emigration is proceeding at a discouraging rate. Unemployment is general in the Jewish settlements. The political status of the Jewish element has not improved. Every phase of Jewish activity in Palestine is showing a marked decline.

The Zionist administration is fully aware of the gravity of the situation. No doubt it has done everything within its power to avert the crisis and to overcome it. It is impossible to expect any greater devotion to a cause than has been shown by Dr. Weizmann and his associates.

The Congress will receive the executive's reports and explanations. It will, however, have to decide whether the point of view and the policy of the administration have been wise. The crisis is there. The administration with its best intentions has been unable to cope with it. The Congress will have to determine why. And it will have to judge whether it might not be advisable to change the personnel of the administration.

In the criticism that will be levelled against the administration bearing on the Palestine situation, it will of course be brought out that the crisis is really but a symptom of the unsoundness of the broader policies which condition the conduct of the executive.

The economic depression suggests the necessity of tariff revision in Palestine. It brings up the question of the crown lands which might be used to alleviate the distress. It also leads to the question of government works that might supply employment for Jewish labor.

Now these questions will open up the larger problem of the relations of the Zionist organization to the government of Palestine and to the mandatory power.

There is a school of opinion that the Zionist leadership has been too timorous in its dealings with the extra-Jewish powers. Palestine has been given by the League of Nations as the scope of the establishment of a Jewish homeland. The mandate requires the facilitation of the creation of a Jewish state in Palestine. Now it is urged that Great Britain as representing the League of Nations is not living up to the spirit of the mandate. Instead of lending assistance to the Jewish people in the Herculean task of rebuilding Palestine, the mandatory power is placing obstacles in the Jewish path. The Congress will have to consider and decide whether or not the Zionist executive has been remiss in insisting on the full political implications of the mandate.

As a corollary of the economic and political ideology of the administration with regard to the Palestine situation comes its treatment of the problem of the Zionist organization itself. The administration lacks decisiveness in its handling of the economic situation. It is timid and hesitant in its political dealings. It is weak and wanting in faith in the power and idealism of the Jewish people. The Zionist administration has lost confidence in the Jewish masses, in their love of Palestine, in their courage and determination, in the potency of the nationalist idea to inspire the Jewish people to heroic effort. It has promulgated the scheme of the Jewish Agency which destroys the hegemony of the Zionist organization and shows its trust in individuals who are hostile to Zionist thought.

The opposition at the Congress, headed by such brilliant men as Zhabotinsky and Solowaychick (Greenbaum was unfortunately defeated), will present its criticisms before the Congress. Its trenchant formulation of the situation is that the present administration has abandoned the Herzlian conception of Zionism. Herzl's Zionism implied the establishment of a real Jewish state, and an abiding faith in the ability of the Jewish people to struggle and achieve a "legally secured, publicly recognized" Jewish state. Herzl's Zionism was one of vision, far-flung horizons, and withal practical, based on the proven capacity of the Jews to persevere in their historic process. Compared with Herzlian Zionism the policy of the present administration is provincial, halting, spineless.

The Congress will listen to the illuminating criticism of the opposition. It will listen to the apologies of an administration weary with the burden which it has been bearing these years. It is not expected that it will adopt any heroic measures. With a gesture of despair it will motion to the administration to continue carrying its burden. And in doing so it will probably determine its character as an instrument of the administration rather than a grand medium for the expression of the seething energy of creative Jewish life.

Federation Director Resigns

Federation of the Jewish Philanthropies of Toronto announces the resignation of Joseph A. Woolf, its executive director, who leaves to become executive director of the Jewish Federation of Toledo, Ohio. Mr. Woolf, who is a graduate of the University of Chicago and of the Chicago School of Civics and Philanthropy, came to Toronto July, 1924, from Cleveland, where he was executive director of the Cleveland Jewish Center. Previous to that Mr. Woolf was with the Jewish Aid Society of Chicago, the Jewish Welfare Board in army welfare work, and for over three years director of Jewish Big Brother work in Pittsburgh.

Federation, under Mr. Woolf's administration, shows its receipts during the last three years to have surpassed even the comparatively high level set by the 1924 campaign. The high water mark in receipts and expenditures in the ten years of Federation was reached in 1926, when $84,000 was received and $88,000 expended. Family welfare work in particular increased. Three years ago less than $30,000 per year was spent. During the last eighteen months of Mr. Woolf's directorship Federation appropriated for family welfare work over $40,000 per year. Each of the organizations was put on a budget and the budget of each was increased from year to year as Federation receipts mounted. The Children's Home extension, at a cost of over $13,000, was built during 1925 and 1926.

Federation, under Mr. Woolf's leadership, enlarged community philanthropic organization in Toronto. The organization of the Junior Federation, Council of Jewish Social Agencies, and the Jewish Social Workers' Club, placed the Toronto Jewish community ahead in the matter of charity and welfare dispensation. During the last four months the efforts of Mr. Woolf were directed toward organizing a united Jewish community chest campaign for this fall.

Mr. Woolf is a board member of the N.W.A. and of the Social Service Exchange, a member of the Central Council of the Federation for Community Service, of the Executive Committee of the Canadian Association of Social Workers, and for two years was honorary secretary of the Jewish Immigrant Aid Society. In 1926 he organized and was honorary secretary of the Talmud Torah campaign.

Mr. Woolf took a prominent part in the three annual Toronto social service conferences held under the auspices of the Toronto agencies and was a speaker at the Canadian National Child Welfare Conference held in Ottawa in 1925. Toledo, to which Mr. Woolf is going, raised $175,000 in 1926 in a joint drive for the United Jewish Campaign and United Palestine appeal, and six months later raised an additional $72,000 for the Bnai Brith Cleveland Orphan Home and the Bnai Brith Hillel Foundation.

Comedy in costume!

That's the revolutionary experiment Douglas MacLean has made by choosing "Soft Cushions," a fast-moving, plentifully gagged tale of the Orient, as the story of his new picture. The smiling comedian appears as a youthful native rogue in this new comedy.

Julius Rosenwald, of Chicago, one of the nation's wealthiest men and great philanthropists, paused amid a surge of business affairs to consider his sixty-fifth birthday. "I was lucky, not a genius," he said, "and I think you will find that is true of most rich men. With rare exceptions, the man who accumulates great wealth displays no more genius than did the capital prize winner in the Louisiana Lottery. By luck he got hold of a good thing, at the right time, and by more luck he held on to it." Forty-two years ago, Mr. Rosenwald started his Chicago career with a little clothing factory.

Following objections made by Irish leaders in New York to the Metro-Goldwyn motion picture, "The Callahans and the Murphys," a movement has been started by the American-Irish Vigilance Committee to obtain a federal censorship law to curb motion picture productions which ridicule men and women of Irish ancestry in this country. This action is the result of the failure of Irish individuals and societies to have the film withdrawn after several weeks' agitation against it.

Influential in the fight is the Irish World, a weekly newspaper published in New York. This paper claimed several weeks ago that the film was highly objectionable to the Irish people and made several suggestions about revising it. The scenes should be taken out that show Mrs. Callahan and Mrs. Murphy in a beer-drinking contest which leaves a whole keg empty; also the free-for-all fight after the contest, which takes place at a picnic; also the close-up of Marie Dressler in the role of Mrs. Callahan. The Metro-Goldwyn Company said that although it had obtained the endorsement of Catholic and Irish organizations before the release of the film and although one-half million dollars was involved in the production, it would revise the film according to the suggestions of the Irish World. Then the revised version was shown in one of Loew's theatres with the assistant district attorney, several Irish leaders and a representative of the Irish World present. What they thought of the revised version of "The Callahans and the Murphys," as told in the Irish World makes one of the most scathing and one of the bitterest attacks against Jewish motion picture producers that it is possible to imagine.

In an editorial called "Plain Words to Movie Directors," the paper cites the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Corporation, Warner Brothers and the Loew companies as being "conspicuous among the Jew organizations that have aroused Irish indignation by the indecent liberties they have presumed to take and the freedom with which they have sought to hold Irish people up to ridicule." The writer dwells on "the modesty and grace of Irish womanhood, the glory of Irish feminine innocence and beauty," and portrays the Jewish producers as "dirty Orientals presuming to maul and paw our women in public" and warns them "to take their dirty hands away from the mothers and the sisters and the daughters of Irishmen." Toward the close of this long, feverish attack with its threat of riot at theatres showing "The Callahans and Murphys," the editorial writer says: "If Marcus Loew and Abraham or Jacob or Izzy Warner want to make money by holding women up to indecent laughter, let them confine their showmen's talents to the Rebeccas and Marthas of their own families. If they want filth and stupidity and indecency, they needn't go out of the ghetto to find it. If they want grotesque figures, Hester Street is full of them." Then the writer maps out a campaign for the withdrawal of the picture calling for concerted action among the Irish against it wherever it is advertised for showing.

This editorial screams out at the top of its voice with invective and the high pitch is maintained from end to end. It is sentimental and maudlin and its threat of riot and manhandling cheapens and weakens its argument. Because the writer sees Jewish producers guilty of reviling the Irish race, it in turn reviles the whole Jewish race to get even with the producers. Also its vehement objection to "The Callahans and the Murphys" may be based on selfish business interest or spite. Just the same, the paper, by whatever route, is fundamentally right in its stand against the miserable, dreary, uncalled-for film comedies which pick out a race for caricaturing.

It must be the regret of discriminating Jews as well as of the Irish that there are producers so tantalized by the success of "Abie's Irish Rose" as to think any junk with Irish or Jewish theme good enough to dump on the screen. Such pictures are in the worst possible taste, vulgar and not worth looking at aside from any objection to their racial themes. Any human being has a right to complain about them and many do, in comparative isolation. The Irish World could perform a greater service by objecting to "The Callahans and the Murphys" on this ground than upon that of racial insult.

However, the oft-insulted Jews will be able to understand very well the indignation and condemnation of the Irish against the film in question. They themselves are second to none in taking deep offense, talking about it, forming delegations and waiting on officials about it, and making protests and writing editorials when they are ridiculed in song or story, speech or picture, or anything. In this instance the Jews have the rare novelty of hearing members of their own race berated for deliberately insulting another race! But they too have a grievance against motion picture producers. The recent vogue for making the Irish the butt of inane, idiotic laughter includes the Jews. As far as films are concerned there can be no fight between the Irish and the Jews. They have both been insulted. Together they make the world's grandest objecting combine. Let them up and at those foolish films—together!

THE SCHWARZBARD TRIAL IN PARIS

M. Flory has been appointed president of the court which will try Shalom Schwarzbard, accused of killing Simon Petlura, the leader of the Ukrainian bands that are alleged to have massacred thousands of Jews in the Ukraine. M. Reignaud, the Public Prosecutor, will open the case for the State on October 17, and the case will last about eight days. Schwarzbard has been in prison now for more than fourteen months.

The chief counsel for the defense is M. Torres, who is prepared to show that Petlura was responsible for the many massacres of Jews. In an article in the Raszwiet, a Russian paper published in Paris, Vladimir Jabotinsky urges that Torres engage additional counsel for the defense of Schwarzbard, claiming that Torres, being a Soviet sympathizer, will prejudice the case. In his reply, Torres said that he was urged to undertake the case only because of his strong Jewish sympathies and that he was convinced that Schwarzbard will be acquitted. The Ukrainian faction in Paris is trying to accuse Torres of complicity in the murder, alleging that Schwarzbard had consulted him before he killed Petlura.

Charles A. Levine, backer of and passenger in the Columbia on its non-stop flight to Germany, now is negotiating with Egyptians in Paris for a non-stop airplane flight from Cairo, Egypt to New York, via Paris, Myer Agen of the continental edition of "The London Daily Mail," said when he arrived in New York. The Egyptians are trying to arrange for a large prize for such a flight, Agen said, and Levine has agreed to provide the plane, the pilot, and the expense money, if such a prize is put up. This would be the longest sustained flight ever attempted.

In the district of Nikopol, Soviet Russia, twenty-nine additional Jewish villages are about to be created to take care of hundreds of Jewish colonists.

"Accept this as a personal invitation to visit us during the Exhibition"

EACH year as Exhibition approaches, we look forward with pleasure to meeting many old friends and customers, who take advantage of the opportunity of dropping in to see us while they are in the city. We like them to do this. We like to show them our modern establishment and the new methods we have adopted or the latest devices we have installed. We are also glad to offer helpful advice on scalp and skin, which may save you dollars and a trip to the city later on. Every visitor whether a customer or not, is urged to accept the invitation this year.

WOMEN have often travelled 1,000 miles — to Paris and other European Fashion Centres—to secure the styles that in the near future are to be designed in Toronto. Jules Bogo now opens in Toronto a real French Fashion Salon.

THIS new Fashion Centre has atmosphere—the right personal touch—skilful designers and a comprehensive selection of the world's choicest materials.

AS Head Designer for the past seven years at Creed's Limited, Mr. Bogo displayed a skill which attracted women who have a style sense and can detect the hand of a master designer in suits, furs or wraps. In his own Salon Mr. Bogo's creative imagination will have a freedom that promises much for the woman who never tires in her search for the unusual.

NORTHERN ONTARIO CANADA

Northern Ontario, now open for settlement at fifty cents per acre, contains millions of acres of the finest agricultural land in the world. Its resources in lumber, minerals, water, power, fish, game and scenery are immense. The land calls for men to cultivate it, and in return will give health, comfort and prosperity.

What settlers say of the soil climate, farming and forest life, is told in a most attractive booklet issued under the direction of the Honourable John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario. Full instructions in regards to acquiring a title to these rich agricultural lands are also given.

ANOTHER CONVENTION IN TORONTO

Some thirty delegates, representing Junior Poalei Zion organizations in various American cities, gathered in Toronto last week to hold their ninth annual convention. In a sense, the Poalei Zion movement is the counterpart of the Young Judaea movement which is now recognized as an important factor in the education of Zionism. The leaders of the Poalei Zion Organization have recognized the fact that if their ideals are to remain a permanent influence in Jewish life it is necessary to pay attention to the younger generation and prepare recruits among its ranks.

It is conceivably easier to gain adherents to the idea of general Zionism among the average youth than to find support for the narrow specialistic code of tenets of the Poalei Zion party. Zionism, as it is understood and taught by the present school of leadership in America, is purely a matter of philanthropy, and does not exact of its votaries any theological orientation. Poalei Zionism, on the other hand, has a definite organon of ideas and credos, some of which are rather taxing on its membership. Its appeal to the younger element must, therefore, be limited to the special type of youth which is inclined to take ideas and theories seriously.

It is not surprising, then, to find among the membership and the delegates of the Junior Poalei Zion a more mature appreciation of the theoretical implications of Zionism, as well as of the practical problems, than one would observe among similar groups of Young Judaea. The enthusiasm that marked by an intensity and eagerness which can be found only among disciples of a cult which does not enjoy social popularity.

A Word from Wise

One explanation on which all seemed agreed at the Zionist Congress in Basle was that the mandatory power has not been living up to the spirit of the mandate in its treatment of the Jewish effort in Palestine.

L. Glazer, president, spoke. Aldermen Joseph Schubert, acting Mayor of Montreal, and Joseph Cohen, K.C., M.P.P., were guest-speakers. Joseph Cohen presented the scholarship bearing his own name, and in the absence of the remaining donors, other scholarships were presented to candidates by Misses Celia Boness, Celia Livinson, Ida Ratner, and Alderman Schubert. Programme: Miss Alice Aracoeff, pianist; I. Silver, soloist; Miss Anna Tritt, elocutionist; and Harry Ivry, accompanied by Mrs. Zigel, violinist. I. J. Charness spoke. Vote of thanks to the speakers, talent and children were moved by A. J. Livinson and seconded by Joseph Bronstein. The scholarships were awarded on a basis of scholarship plus personal need and the Club has organized a Big Brother follow-up movement to keep in touch with the children who have come under their supervision during the past few years, totalling ninety. Zhabotinsky and Gruenbaum, the leaders of the opposition, were of course expected to voice their dissatisfaction with the manner in which Great Britain has been carrying out the intent of the mandate. It was somewhat of a surprise to hear the clear and ringing arraignment sounded by Dr. Stephen Wise in his reference to the mandate. Especial significance is attached to Dr. Wise's speech in view of the fact that Dr. Wise is chairman of the political committee of the Congress. Both Sokolow and Weizmann gave the impression that they were in agreement with and approved of the tenor of Wise's utterances.

The adoption by the Congress of a censorious attitude towards the mandatory power is an admission that in at least one point the criticism of Zhabotinsky was justified. The opposition has been urging all along that the Zionist administration has been weak in its handling of the political phase of its work. As a matter of fact it has been held that the fundamental weakness of the present leadership lay in its neglect of the political side of Zionism—the side which was stressed so much by Herzl. The acceptance by the Congress of Wise's point of view may be construed as a confession of error and culpability on the part of the Weizmann leadership. It remains to be figured out whether the partial confession does not logically involve a confession of error and weakness all along the line.

"Tell me," said the Inspector, "what is a Shofar?" "A Shofar," replied the Rabbi, "is—a Shofar." The Inspector was hardly satisfied with this description of the missing article and interrogated successively the "Shammes" and ten other Jews, who all gave him the same answer, that "a Shofar was—a Shofar."

The Inspector, thoroughly exasperated, sent a policeman for the Rabbi and said to him, "My dear and reverend sir, for the last three hours I have been trying to discover what a Shofar is but with no success. If you do not tell me immediately what a Shofar is, I swear that I will put you in prison."

"Well," replied the Rabbi, "if you must know, a Shofar is a trumpet."

"Then why in the name of goodness," thundered the Inspector, "did you not tell me this three hours ago?"

"Because," calmly replied the Rabbi, "a Shofar is not a trumpet."

Collapse of Inspector.

M. Henri Torres, chief Counsel for Shalom Schwartzbard, acted as chairman at a public meeting of the French Society for Promoting Jewish Colonization in Russia, held in Paris. M. Bernard Lecache, who recently visited Russia and the Ukraine, said that he had convinced himself during his tour of the Jewish colonies that Jewish life in Russia and the Ukraine was reviving now after the many years of famine and pogroms. Sholom Ash, noted Yiddish author, said that support of the work of Jewish colonization in Russia did not signify approval of all the "ten commandments" of the Soviet regime. It was possible to be interested in Palestine and also in the Jewish colonization work in Russia. The establishment of the Jews in agriculture was a great work.

TOUGH LUCK

The banker Blumenthal received a visit from the schnorrer Kornfeld.

"Kornfeld, is that you again? Really, it is inexplicable how such an intelligent man as you are has achieved nothing in life. Can you do nothing else but be a schnorrer?"

"True, Mr. Blumenthal. I well know that I could do something else. But, alas! I have succeeded in nothing during my whole life, because I am a schlemiel."

"You are a schlemiel?"

"Yes. For example, I am a musician."

"You are a musician? What instrument do you play?"

"What instrument do I play? Why, a post-horn."

"Well, that is curious! So do I. I often play the post-horn. I will fetch it now for you."

The banker rang for his servant and asked him to bring in the post-horn.

"You see," said the schnorer, "what a schlemiel I am. I happen to tell you that I play the post-horn, and it just turns out that you have one. So has it been with me throughout my life."

In a recent article in the "Atlantic Monthly," entitled "The Revolt of a Middle-Aged Father," Dr. Isaac M. Rubinow, author and sociologist, points out the necessity of a radical change in college education, describes the situation which calls for change and gives a panacea for it. As a father who has assumed the duty of seeing three children through college at a total cost of $18,000, entailing many sacrifices to himself and his wife, Dr. Rubinow asks whether it was all necessary, wise, fair to the parents and worth while to the children. What he has to say is interesting to parents and children, especially at this time of the year. This column is an attempt to condense Dr. Rubinow's article.

In 1870 one out of 150 youths was in college. In 1927 the proportion is probably near to one out of twelve. There are some 600,000 students in colleges. Each requires $1,500 per year to be "educated" comfortably. The total amount expended by parents, then, is nine millions of dollars. But no matter how high the tuition fees no student pays more than twenty or twenty-five per cent of what it actually costs the college to instruct him. The expenditure of college over and above the income from college fees may amount to about 400 millions of dollars. Added in the great collective social cost is the lack of income from capital outlays, the enforced idleness of 600,000 young people, their non-productive existence.

Life on the large campus reminds Dr. Rubinow of a summer hotel—"exuberant youth, loud, sporty clothes, cars, meandering couples, total absence of care, all smacking of vacation rather than vocation." The average requirements of a college are about fifteen hours a week. The working week, considering laboratory work, reading and study, may mean about thirty-five hours, "pretty easy compared with the working hours of millions of young persons of the same age who have entered productive occupations and are partly or wholly making their own living." There is always time left for amateur dramatics, journalism, politics, art clubs, fraternities, social life and the normal amount of amateur or serious love-making. Some also manage to work at various occupations and partly or entirely pay their way through college, so the others must have time to waste. Vacations amount to about twenty-two weeks of leisure when the prime consideration is how to spend the summer. Some do work, as long as it is not too strenuous work, but the most languish at home bored to death, especially the girls, creating problems for parents and family. Physically these college students are grown up, strong enough to perform athletic feats, and their health is usually above the average. Not so very long ago persons at their age were the mothers and fathers of the race. They ought to be self-supporting. Instead, the American attitude seems to say: "Let the middle-aged and the old folks, those of fifty years and over, work more and harder, so that our boys and girls between eighteen and twenty-four may have more time to play while they are studying a little."

A general education cannot be crammed down in four years of college, certified by an A.B. degree. What then does the student get for the money? He gets his A.B. degree, which usually certifies about 1,920 hours of classroom instruction, with proper deductions for vacations, holidays, and cuts, excused and unexcused. To a number the hours of classroom attendance may mean some education, some culture, knowledge, weltanschauung. It may mean any or all of these things. And again it may mean nothing beyond a formal compliance with the minimum requirements and some luck and dexterity at the final examinations. No unified plan for a rounded-out general educational programme has been created. There is no reason whatever why the present educational process should call for four years of so-called college life. The ideal general education and culture is obtained in the colleges by only an infinitesimal proportion of students and is not even encouraged by the college or student body. And no one who possesses this much-desired culture (something much more substantial than the mere polish of a gentleman) has obtained it during specified years of college.

That a growing proportion of students are becoming conscious of what they miss by their college obligations is shown by the numbers, especially of men, dropping out before the four-year period is completed. Dr. Rubinow gives three objectionable by-products of the college system: "First and foremost, college delays entry into life's work by four years. Secondly, a habit of excessive leisure is definitely established. It may even be cultural, gentlemanly leisure devoted to reading magazines, with [illegible] makes for the type of junior whose main talent is in speeding a car and sponging on the 'governor,' with a lack of power of concentration upon a day's work unless there is some promise of a thrill or a kick in it. The college period of economic irresponsibility protracts into a period of life when young people should be dependent upon themselves offers a strong stimulus to day-dreaming."

As to why hundreds of thousands annually clamor for entrance into colleges, some want scientific knowledge, or culture, or have a desire for preliminary preparation necessary for the study of a profession; or, primarily for girls, to seek a marriage market. As to why most young people go to college, Dr. Rubinow fears "it is the lure of college life, its freedom from responsibility, from worry, from economic pressure and hard work, that proves the greatest attraction as far as the student is concerned. Convention and the herd spirit move the father; social distinction throws its spell over the mother. Everybody is doing it; therefore it must be the right thing to do."

Dr. Rubinow questions the college system because it puts the greatest emphasis on play and considers work either as a necessary evil or not at all. What is desired is a proper balance between work and study and play. The education of the masses should not be parasitic. "A movement in the right direction could be achieved by abolishing the A.B. degree, a silly, childish, antiquated, snobbish academic title which stands for nothing of definite intellectual or cultural value. With it must go veneration for idleness masquerading as intellectual leisure." The centre of gravity of the modern college must turn from the full-time student to the part-time student who is only interested in academic [illegible] for knowledge [illegible]

Baron Maurice de Rothschild, a racing man and member of the French Chamber of Deputies, has been challenged to a duel by Louis Cartier, wealthy Parisian jeweller. In making up a list of guests for a dance that he was giving in his magnificent home in the Rue Monceau a few nights ago, Baron Maurice, who is a great-great-grandson of the founder of the famous financial dynasty, wrote down the name of Mme. Louis Cartier, who is one of the great Parisian beauties, but intentionally left out that of her husband. His social secretary made an error and sent the invitation to "Monsieur and Madame Louis Cartier," who were ignorant of the baron's real wishes. "What are you doing here?" Baron Maurice asked M. Cartier as soon as he saw him.

"I am here because you invited me," M. Cartier replied sharply.

"You are mistaken," the Baron insisted, while a number of guests stood listening to this conversation in amazement.

"Our invitation was addressed to 'Monsieur and Madame Cartier,'" M. Cartier declared hotly.

"Anyway, I don't want you here," the Baron remarked and walked away. Then followed the challenge.

Editor,
CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW.

At a friend's house the other day I happened to glance through your issue of August 19. In the column headed "Every Friday" you bemoan the fact that a New York cantor has been engaged to conduct the coming High Holiday services at the spacious Academy of Music in Philadelphia at a salary of $15,000, and that his choir would cost another $10,000, etc., and how reprehensible it is that "a cantor should be the centre of business arrangements that capitalize occasions assumed to be of great religious significance," and that "the commercial aspect of the whole thing is certainly not in keeping with the solemnity of Rosh Hashonah and Yom Kippur."

It seems to me that it is you, in your non-constructive criticism, who is stressing the commercial side of the occasion. In reality the commercial aspect is here only incidental, if you will permit my correction. Would that more money were spent to enlarge our synagogues and to engage the best of cantors and choirs for the beautification of our services so that our young might find something elevating in them besides a sermon which, more often than not, is drab and dry, and prayers which to them are meaningless because parents have neglected to teach them their content and significance.

Some day when cantors, deserving ones, will be made independent, free from material cares, so that they might devote all of their time to beautifying the services and to train the talented young people so that they may be able to take their places when the time comes, then will there be no more of what you call "commercializing of services." Some day when the Jew will support his Synagogue as the Christian supports his Church, when there will be enough synagogues to house even those Jewish worshippers who are reminded of their religion only when the High Holidays arrive, and when there will be no need for holding improvised services in any vacant premises as is now the case because suddenly swelled ranks of worshippers cannot be accommodated in the existing synagogues due to lack of space—then will there be no cause for complaint such as you voice.

Incidentally, and in all fairness to the Cantor whose name you did not wish to mention but whom all, nevertheless, know to be our beloved "Yosele" Rosenblatt—who is an emblem of all that is fine, and noble, and beautiful—your readers ought to know that most of his earnings have gone to pay off certain moral obligations which he incurred. In backing an orthodox Jewish publication, "The Light of Israel," whose object it was to strengthen traditional Judaism, he lost all he possessed and in addition was involved in commercial debts amounting to over $150,000. Harrassed by his creditors who believed him possessed of a great fortune which he really never had because of his charitable inclinations, he had no other alternative than to go into bankruptcy. Although gaining legal freedom in this way, he nevertheless considered that only as a breathing spell, for he has already repaid over $60,000 of these obligations from which he would not even let the law free him, and with God's help he will continue to pay them. Can anyone now say that Cantor Rosenblatt was not justified in accepting an "engagement" to conduct High Holiday services in Philadelphia for $15,000?

When one tells a story let him tell the whole story or let him hold his peace.

Respectfully,
LON RUSKIN.

GERMAN STUDENTS REJECT JEWISH NATIONALISM

The Federation of German Students held their twenty-fifth conference at Freiburg last week.

Rabbi Dr. Goldmann, who delivered the principal address, said further that the Federation would continue on its path of uniting Germanists and Judaists and would seek to train German Jews to make their contribution towards this end. It was their duty not to shut themselves out from the general life, Jewish nationalism sought to change the direction of their life, sought to make Judaism ...

LOEW'S

Theatregoers now have a chance to witness the initial performance of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's new screen comedy team, Lew Cody and Aileen Pringle in a number of feature comedies, the first of which is scheduled for Loew's next week. "Adam and Evil," directed by Robert Z. Leonard, is based on an original story by F. Hugh Herbert and Florence Ryerson, co-authors of "The Demi-Bride," directed by Leonard and starring Norma Shearer with Lew Cody. The cast of "Adam and Evil" includes Gwen Lee, Roy d'Arcy, Gertrude Short and Hedda Hopper.

It is a snappy tale of love and adventure and tells a new story of the Garden of Eden.

REGENT

Red-blooded, uproarious comedy dominates "What Price Glory?" in its picturized form now at Regent. War scenes that set a new mark for screen realism and stupendousness provide poignant moments, but they serve mainly as a background and contrast for the rich vein of comedy which prevails throughout. Strenuous and hard-boiled in love and play as well as war, Captain Flagg and Sergeant Quirt stand forth as unique and positive characters. Victor McLaglen and Edmund Lowe were capital selections for these roles, and so also was Dolores del Rio for Mam'selle Charmaine, the object of their joint affections. A large symphony orchestra and back-stage effects add further realism. Performances are given twice daily, at 2.30 and 8.30. All seats reserved.

ABRAHAMIC EXCAVATIONS

Remains of an ancient city wall and gate and ancient vessels belonging to various periods, but mostly Abrahamic, have been discovered in the excavations now being conducted at Mount Napoleon on the Tel-Aviv-Petach Tikvah road. The Mount was the camp of Napoleon's troops in Palestine in the campaign of 1799 and also served as an important military centre during the Great War. The Mount was acquired last June by I. L. Goldberg, of Tel-Aviv, who obtained a permit from the Government to conduct excavations there.

Hitherto scientists have believed that the Tamarisk manna is a secretion of the Tamarisk. The expedition has discovered, however, that this is not the case, the manna being really the secretion of the Coccidea—parasites living on the Tamarisk—and not of the Tamarisk itself.

The production of manna was observed by the expedition during the whole course of their investigation, including localities which are not mentioned in the literature of the Tamarisk manna. The expedition has brought back a very rich material on the subject of the manna problem.

A FAMOUS CEMETERY

A visit to Willesden Cemetery in London is interesting. Here in a modest group lie the Rothschilds, Lord Nathaniel Rothschild's monument being the only one with his title inscribed. The other members of the family, leaders in finance and society, have just their given names on the tomb with the worldly titles omitted. What need have they in their eternal sleep of the grandiose sounding distinction of class? Many a poor family in Chicago has a more imposing monument than many rich English Jews. A plain slab, beautifully cut, covers the father and mother of the Duveens, famous in the art world. Lord and Lady Bearsted have a plain tombstone, while Lady Rosebery lies in a mausoleum along with many others. What strikes one as singular in this cemetery, however, is the propensity of the relatives of many of the departed to have the last address of the deceased on the monument. Thus one is shown to have lived in Belgravia and the other Whitechapel.

THE MIRACLE OF THE MANNA

Expedition Investigates

A scientific expedition from the Hebrew University of Jerusalem has for the past month been conducting investigations in the Peninsula of Sinai with a view to establishing the nature of the manna which, the Bible records, fell in the Wilderness while the Children of Israel were wandering there.

The expedition, consisting of Dr. Bodenheimer, Director of the Department of Entomology at the Agricultural Experimental Station of the Palestine Zionist Executive, Dr. Carmin and Dr. Theodore, Associate Professors at the Micro-biological Department of the Hebrew University, has just returned to Jerusalem. The expedition investigated the character of the Tamarisk, an evergreen shrub which grows in Sinai and other desert regions around the Mediterranean, with which scientists have long associated manna, naming it Tamarisk manna. The Tamarisk is frequently mentioned in the Bible under the name of Eshel.

THREE BIG LITTLE WORDS

Happy New Year

AT the advent once more of the High Holidays comes the beautiful Jewish custom of sending New Year's Greetings to one's relatives and friends. This custom, originated by the Jewish people, is thousands of years old. In ancient Judaea the town crier would carry the message to the dwellers in the villages and the cities, to the country-folk gathered in the towns to celebrate Rosh Hashonah in the traditional manner.

With the flight of time the honourable profession of town crier disappeared. But the deeply rooted custom among the Jewish people of sending "L'Shono Tovu" greetings remained. And there gradually grew up a custom of sending personal greeting cards through the mails. Many of these cards were works of art, and are treasured as heirlooms to this day.

When cities and towns were small, and one knew one's friends intimately, this system worked perfectly. But as cities grew, and one's circle of friends extended, it was inevitable that in the hurly-burly of sending hundreds of cards, some cherished friends were overlooked. The endless explanations and heart-burnings caused the development of a new and better system.
